

COMMUNITY NEWS SERVICE

Local reporting from the University of Vermont

Spring 2024

56 students published

200 pieces of journalism

413 pickups

Student Journalism by the Numbers → → → →

Our program sustained its success from 2023 for the first session of 2024

UVM Programs

42 students working for CNS published 179 article and photo assignments

News outlets ran their work 392 times

Collabs with Other Campuses

14 students from Castleton University, St. Michael's College and the Underground Workshop high school program did 21 stories

Outlets ran those 21 times

Deep reporting from public records requests

Data analysis of Vermont's major transit players

Town Meeting Day coverage across the state

City Council coverage in Winooski

Weekly reports on the legislative session

Narrative profiles of artists, athletes and more

Environmental reporting on water, critters and farms

Public-service stories at the local level

vtcommunitynews.org

Richard Watts, founder
Justin Trombly, editor
Carolyn Shapiro, print instructor
Lexi Krupp, audio instructor

Nathaniel Borrok-Hoffman, webmaster
Matt Dooman, social media manager
Greta Solsaa, administrative coordinator

Lily Doton, southern bureau editor
Dom Minadeo, deputy editor
Siobhan Neela-Stock, Winooski News editor
Jim Welch, editor at large

Funding and support comes courtesy of UVM's College of Arts and Sciences and Center for Community News. Additional funding comes from donors. CNS reporting internships are housed in CAS 3922. Data current as of June 13. Photos by Andy Duback.